DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

1. Claims 1-4 are allowed.
2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance.

Shiga et al. clearly teaches the construction of an automobile generator apparatus having:

a converter composed of semiconductor rectifying devices for rectifying the power output of a magnetic generator and an inverter for converting a direct current output of the converter into an alternating current form of a particular frequency, comprising:

a semiconductor rectifying device driving means for controlling the conduction of the semiconductor rectifying devices to maintain the voltage output of the converter at a target voltage level;

a revolution detecting means for detecting the revolution of the magnetic generator;

a conduction rate detecting means for detecting the conduction rate of the semiconductor rectifying devices; and an engine revolution controlling means for controlling the revolution of an engine to drive the generator so that the conduction rate is converged on a predetermined target rate, wherein the controlling of the revolution of the engine is implemented by adjusting the supply of fuel to the engine, wherein a rate of change of the revolution of the engine is greater at an increase than at a decrease thereof.

Kato teach the construction of an apparatus and method for engine idle speed control having engine revolution controlling means arranged to decrease the revolution of the engine when the deviation of the conduction rate from the target rate is positive and increase the same when negative for the purpose of either increasing or decreasing the idle speed of an engine so that the actual conduction rate approaches the desired conduction rate.

The prior art of record, taken alone or in combination, fails to teach the construction of an inverter-controlled generator set converter composed of semiconductor rectifying devices for rectifying the power output of a magnetic generator as described on independent claim 1, comprising:

a semiconductor rectifying device driving means for controlling the conduction of the semiconductor rectifying devices to maintain the voltage output of the converter at a target voltage level  $m$  wherein the target voltage level is a target reference level to stabilize the voltage output of the converter; and a target voltage setting means for setting the target reference level to be low when the detected speed is low and to be high when the detected speed is high so that the voltage input of the inverter shows a stabilized positive characteristic to the detected speed.

Dependent claims 2-4 are considered allowable by their dependence on allowed independent claim 1.
